Mapping Out Our Week

Reading: Reading Workshop

In reading, we will be working with the strategy of visualizing. Students will be encouraged to "make a movie" in their heads while reading the text. We will work with both fiction and non-fiction pieces. We will also be preparing Flat Stanley for his voyages around the world.

Writing: Writing Workshop

In writing, we have completed our "seeds" or ideas. We will not work on writing personal narratives. Students will be writing about special moments in their lives. We will also be reviewing proper capitalization and punctuation, as well as complete sentences.

Math: Unit 1- Multiplication/Division

This week, we will complete our first math unit. Students will be taking the final unit test on Friday, so a study guide will come home next Tuesday to help them prepare. We will finish the unit by learning about using bar models and reviewing all of our strategies.

Social Studies: Map Skills

We will finish practicing using physical and political maps on Monday, which is our final lesson. A study guide will come home on Monday to help students prepare for a map skills' quiz on Wednesday. Next up: Science - soil

Matey of the Week

Please see the information regarding the Matey of the Week (Star Student) in your son or daughter's folder this weekend. Students will be highlighted in our newsletter and on the website each week, but initials will be used instead of names in order to protect privacy. If you've requested no publishing, your child will still be highlighted in the room; however their information will not be published on the site or in the weekly newsletter.
